

How to Study for an Exam – Math 81 – Fall 2010

I believe that the best preparation for Math exam is doing a little bit of Math EVERY DAY between the exams. I think that Math is about repetition... My rule is to never skip anything that I do not understand!!! So I figured that skipping things that I do not understand in Math can sometimes screw up the whole Math class and affect my grade.

*This week I will prepare for the test by doing the homework assigned and asking questions about the things I don't understand. I will review the material before the test.

*I am probably not going to do anything except listen to Eye of The Tiger before the test...

i think ill start by doing the homework and end it with excellence. then i may try checking out the study hall for assistance if i deem it necessary. It may also be helpful to acquire the text book!

I will prepare by vigorously studying my Math Homework, Study my notes, and listen to Bob Marley. I also have another study habit that has proven to be successful, I pet my wallaby on a regular basis.

I will study my home work and my class notes a little bit every night. I try to focus on anything that is giving me trouble. I also find it helpful to listen to music while I study. Oh, also watching the double rainbow guy, a good mood is good for studying.

Well in high school i never study for anything. I pretty much understood it the first time around. But looking at some of the homework problems, study like mad on the stuff i dont know already. Ask questions on any problems i just cant figure out by myself or with a friends help.

I prepared for this math test by doing all the odd number problems in the book beyond what we were assigned. I also look over the notes and material every day to ensure that I retain it.

*I will prepare for the test by reviewing the concepts as presented in the book and the class. I will also make sure I have a good breakfast as this seems to help me think clearer.

To prepare myself for any test, I first have to put myself in the best environment to concentrate. That means I'll have to spend extra time on campus, either earlier in the morning or after classes.
